

We Must Starve Them

Fantasy Free Economics, James Quillian

Posted on April 3, 2019 by Fantasy Free Economics

Your only defense against the Deep State or New World Order, European Union, Federal Reserve or any of today's corrupt entities is to stop spending money. You may be convinced that Donald Trump or some other politician is your fairy god mother. If that is you, then you are enabling all of the elite who profit from the newly improved activity of human herding.

Look very closely and you may notice striking parallels today between how your betters motivate you and how folks in agriculture manage the behavior of animals. Notice how you train and motivate your dog. The process of herding and training human beings makes use of the same tools as are used in dealing with any animal. Offer humans a treat and a promise of security and almost all will follow you wherever you lead them.

The practice of humans herding one another goes back, possibly before the advent of herding lower animals. The basic idea of herding is to capture animals, group them together concisely so they are easy to deal with and then make use of them in any way that is wished. Chances are, when one tribe defeated another and slaves were captured, the slaves were the original herds and the practice of herding lower animals evolved later. Although, slavery is almost gone, it still behooves the elite to manipulate the masses into the the closest situation to slavery that is legal.

Human herding has always been with us but much of the process is not all that unpleasant. People join herds voluntarily as they trade their freedom for comfort. Any time a group forms, notice how enterprising people manage to place themselves at the top of the group. There are countless ways to extract benefits out of an aggregation of people. This is completely natural behavior. It is so natural folks don't notice themselves engaging in it. Human herding is a survival tool and that tool is alive and being used today. I am not sure a society could function at all without humans herding one another for profit and security. That changes when human herding is about all there is.

In the incipient days of the internet, goodwill was what drove its growth. I was astounded that an institution would grow based on goodwill. That an institution could even evolve without the use of some coercion or reward for participation was a surprise. Of course that all changed. After years passed, the Internet's enormous value as a human herding tool became apparent. Today, the internet is used to organize humans, manage their opinions and guide them in ways that benefit the elite members of the world we live in. Today's corporations are diverse in terms of the final products they produce. The activity of human herding has become the major activity which drives profits.

Entities like the European Union and the New World Order/Deep State, guide and facilitate the human herding practice. Societies are now organized in ways which maximize the use of inhabitants as points of profit. Most corporations benefit greatly from having the thoughts and behaviors of their customers managed and homogenized. Offer the population comfort and security for turning in their freedom for comfort and the majority will be happy to be managed and homogenized.

When I use the terms Deep State and New world order, I am not recognizing them as formal organizations even though they may be. A mindset can be so pervasive among certain groups that they naturally work together and take on the appearances of organized groups.

The European Union along with the Deep State/New World order exist for no other reason than to facilitate the organization and manipulation of people around the globe so that their use as resources for the elite of the world is optimized.

So, what is it about you that is of use to your betters? You are needed as a buyer of merchandise. You are a needed as a buyer of stock when the elite wish to unload. You may be needed as a soldier to be used in fighting a war for profit. You exist to serve the elite in life's activities. Your biggest role is to buy what you are expected to buy. Do you use a smart phone? Great, that keeps you tethered to your betters.

Mostly, what you contribute is the money you spend. Lack of consumer spending will starve the Deep State. I can't think of anything else that will serve as a defense against them.