

Mueller And The Report

Fantasy Free Economics, James Quillian

Posted on March 25, 2019 by Fantasy Free Economics

I am 69 years old. I have never spent a night in jail. The biggest crime I have ever been convicted of, was when my dog got out of the yard and I got a ticket for that. That was more serious on the misdemeanor scale than a traffic ticket. If I had some political power, perhaps I could get a pardon. There was also a time in the 90s when the city forced me to get rid of two goats I had in my backyard but then I was only threatened with a fine.

Still, if my life was investigated as thoroughly as has been the life of Donald Trump, I might be in front of a firing squad this morning. I am truly surprised at how squeaky clean our president is at least in the areas in which he has been investigated. Granted, the man is a whore monger and has the personal morals of an alley cat. Regardless of that, it is wrong to accuse anyone of things they clearly haven't done in a corrupt attempt to dispose of someone. Now we are sure that his immorality is all of the sexual and personal nature.

Anyone who comes to this site from time to time surely knows that I am no fan of Donald Trump. I don't support presidents. I am an American citizen and part of the sovereign. In self government the president gets his authority from the sovereign. Supporting a president is wrong. Supporting is the right way to deal with a king. My job is to rein in presidents and representatives who get out of hand. Don't mistake me for a friend of any president. A president is a world leader. The pool of world leaders is where despots come from. Which ones are the despots? Despots don't announce their presence nor their intentions. It is prudent to hold all world leaders at arms length and trust none of them. Trusting world leaders is a tried and tested method for cutting ones survival short.

There is a principle of natural law that says, actions initiated for an immoral purpose will result in negative outcomes. Attack Donald Trump for something negative he is actually doing and the effort will be worthwhile. What is he doing wrong? The biggest thing is sponsoring the largest theft by stimulus program the world has ever seen. So, which Trump detractors are concerned about the genuine damage he is actually doing? Concerned? When it is time to fleece the public Trump and Democrats are completely on the same page.

So what are Trump detractors doing? They are calling him names. They are making false accusations against him. They are focusing on anything they can pick up and throw at him regardless of whether it is true or not. Although it is counter intuitive to see it, they are guaranteeing their own loss in 2020. Trump policies however do need to be opposed.

Tell lies, get busted over and over again and no one in the world is going to believe a thing you say.